Care and maintenance of your electronic cigarette

- Length of cartridge life: This will depend slightly on what type of smoker you are – heavy or light. The manufacturers state that one cartridge is equivalent to 20 cigarettes, but our customers have found that one cartridge is roughly equivalent to 7 – 15 cigarettes.
- To clean you atomiser: there are several tips on the forums, but the best way is to get some canned air, and blow this through the atomiser. Blow through the small hole (i.e the battery end, as this will blow out any debris), do this last thing at night, and the atomiser is then clean and ready for use the next day. Don't forget to also blow through the small side hole in the atomiser.
- Before going to bed disconnect the battery from the atomiser, batteries can drain over night as they are in standby mode when not being used.
- How often to charge your battery: When you first receive your kit, your batteries may be part charged, so you may only need to charge them for a few hours, not the full 8 hours that the manual states. Once you are using your Electronic Cigarette, have one battery on charge while you are using the other, and you may find that in use, one battery will last 3 – 4 hours before needing to be re-charged.

Troubleshooting

Why is my Electronic Cigarette not smoking?

First check that the cartridge has not dried up.

Change your cartridges when the smoke begins to diminish, if you stand a weak cartridge on its end (opposite end that you draw on) for a while it will smoke well again.

- Check that the battery is fully charged, if needed try a newly charged battery
- If there is still no smoke, it may be that the atomiser needs to be replaced.
- Try not to drop, bash or sit on your Electronic Cigarette as this will damage the component parts, protective cases are available via your retailer or the website.

We strongly advice that you have two atomisers, and rotate them daily, so use one one day, one the next, as they are the work horse of the Electronic Cigarette, and rotating them appears to prolong their life. Cleaning them regularly will also help prolong their life.
